

David Makman

Professor David Makman is an affiliated scholar with the Center for East Asian Legal Studies and an adjunct professor at UC Law SF, where he teaches Japanese Law and Legal Institutions. He specializes in cross-border disputes and has extensive experience with technology law and intellectual property law, including high stakes patent infringement litigation involving electronics, semiconductor manufacturing, software, and other technologies. He also handles commercial litigation and disputes relating to corporate governance, primarily for startups and member-managed LLCs. Additionally, he has a great deal of experience in international arbitration and in litigating complex issues involving conflicts of law. Prior to founding The Law Offices of David A. Makman in 2009, Mr. Makman served as counsel with Howrey LLP and as an associate at Morrison & Foerster, Fish & Neave, and Loeb and Loeb. Prof. Makman reads and speaks Japanese and has served as Chairman of the Board of the Japan Society of Northern California. He holds a J.D. and an LL.M. in International and comparative Law from Duke University Law School.
